About Atwater Village

Atwater Village is a Los Angeles community that lies between the Los Angeles River to the west and the City of Glendale to the north and east. In addition, our neighborhood shares borders with the neighborhoods of Silver Lake to the south, Elysian Valley to the southeast, Glassell Park to the northeast, and Los Feliz and Griffith Park across the Los Angeles River to the west. Much of Atwater lies in the old river flood plain, which resulted in deep, fertile soil that local gardeners enjoy today.

Principal thoroughfares include Fletcher Drive, and Los Feliz and Glendale Boulevards. The Golden State and Glendale Freeways run along the district's western and southeastern borders, respectively.

Today, Atwater Village is a vibrant community in every aspect. This community continues to attract new homeowners and renters alike while keeping residents that have lived here for generations. Atwater is one of the most ethnically and economically diverse communities in Los Angeles County; our village is a place where artists, young professionals and working class folk live side by side. Atwater property values remain relatively high with a low vacancy rate for both commercial and residential properties and the crime rate is one of the lowest in the area.

Atwater Village is also a self-sustained community. We enjoy the use of our own post office, library, first-rate public and private schools, numerous religious institutions and even an equestrian district—unique in the City of Los Angeles. We have a robust and diverse business community that serves the community, providing a wide range of goods, services and jobs.
